WOMEN AGROECOLOGY PROGRAMMES

This programme works with women farmers to build knowledge around sustainable farming. It focuses on saving seeds, growing vegetables, protecting local biodiversity, and learning natural farming methods. Through meetings, trainings, and field visits, women learn how to take care of their land while also improving food security for their families and communities.

The programme mainly works with women in the Sundarbans. It supports them through practical training, group meetings, and community activities so they can become more confident and active in farming.

COMMUNITY CHILDREN'S FACILITATION PROGRAMMES

This programme works with children in the community by creating safe and open spaces where they can learn, play, and express themselves. Through spaces like Khelaghor, children get a chance to explore ideas beyond regular classroom learning.

Activities include environmental storytelling, science sessions, nature-based learning, and creative workshops such as drawing and comic-making. These sessions are designed to keep learning simple, fun, and connected to their surroundings.

Children are encouraged to ask questions, observe nature, and share their thoughts freely. Many activities also introduce them to topics such as the environment, food, water, and everyday life in ways they can understand.

Overall, the programme helps children become more curious, confident, and expressive, while building a strong connection with their community and environment.

YOUTH PROGRAMMES

Young people take the lead in organising discussions, small gatherings, awareness walks, and exhibitions. Many of these actions come out through artistic expression. They use rap, dance, storytelling, and visual art to talk about water, farming, and the environment, making these conversations more open and relatable for others.

Overall, the programme supports youth in becoming thoughtful, expressive, and active, using both dialogue and art to engage with water and agroecology issues.

Along with this, they also use audio visual mediums like videos, recordings, and documentation to tell stories from their communities.
